DR. H. C. ROBBINS SELECTED TO SPEAK AT COMMENCEMENT

Many Activities Planned For Week-End of June 17 to 20.

Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral of St. John, The Divine, New York City, will give the annual address at the Commencement Exercises in the Congregational Church, Monday, June 20. Dr. Robbins was graduated from Yale in 1899 and for several years was a student at Princeton Theological Seminary. In 1903 he received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity from the Episcopal Theological School, later receiving his D.D. from Williams. Prior to his affiliation with St. John's in 1917, Dr. Robbins served as Rector of St. Paul's Englewood, N. J., and of the Church of Incarnation, N. Y. C. He is a trustee of Barnard College, Seaman's Church Institute, and a director of the New York Training School for Deaconesses. He is a member of the National Institute of Social Sciences.

The program for Commencement Week opens Friday evening when "Outward Bound," by Sutton Vane, will be presented by Seniors of the Play Production Course, at the Playhouse. The play will be repeated on the following evening.

On Saturday, registration will be in order throughout the day at Egbert Starr Library. Class Day Exercises will be held at 10 on the campus. The forenoon will also be taken up by meetings of the various councils and associations of the college. A baseball game, St. Lawrence vs. Middlebury, will be played on Porter Field at 2:15 p. m. At 7:30 an outdoor concert will be given by the Band and Men's Glee Club, followed by informal dancing in the gymnasium until 12.

The Baccalaureate Service at Mead Memorial Chapel will take place Sunday morning at 10:45. The annual Sunday dinner will be served at Bread Loaf Inn at 1 o'clock. A Twilight Musicale of organ and instrumental music will be given at 5 in the afternoon at the Chapel. Step Singing at Pearson's and Fraternity Reunions will be held in the evening.

The annual meeting of Phi Beta Kappa will be held in Old Chapel at 9 o'clock Monday morning. At 10 the Commencement Procession forms at Old Chapel, proceeding to the Congregational Church where the Exercises will be held at 10:30. Commencement Dinner will be served at 1 o'clock in the Gymnasium. A baseball game, Alumni vs. Varsity, is scheduled for the afternoon at 3:30. The President's Reception and Commencement Ball will be the final events of the program.

BASEBALL TEAM HAS ACCIDENT

The Hudson touring car in which six members of the Middlebury college baseball team were riding turned over last Friday morning between West Stafford and Sommers, Conn. According to the reports the road on which the accident happened was being reconstructed, and previous to the trouble some blasting had taken place. The car, going about 25 miles an hour hit a sharp stone causing the left rear tire to blow out. This caused the automobile to skid to one side and in an attempt to right it, the car turned turtle, in the middle of the road. The body of the car was a complete wreck after the spill.

William Petersen, the driver was seriously cut, necessitating his removal to a hospital for treatment. Albert M. Saldutti '30 sprained his knee and "Swede" Sorenson '29 dislocated his shoulder and cut his face. John Marchukaitis injured his arm and his

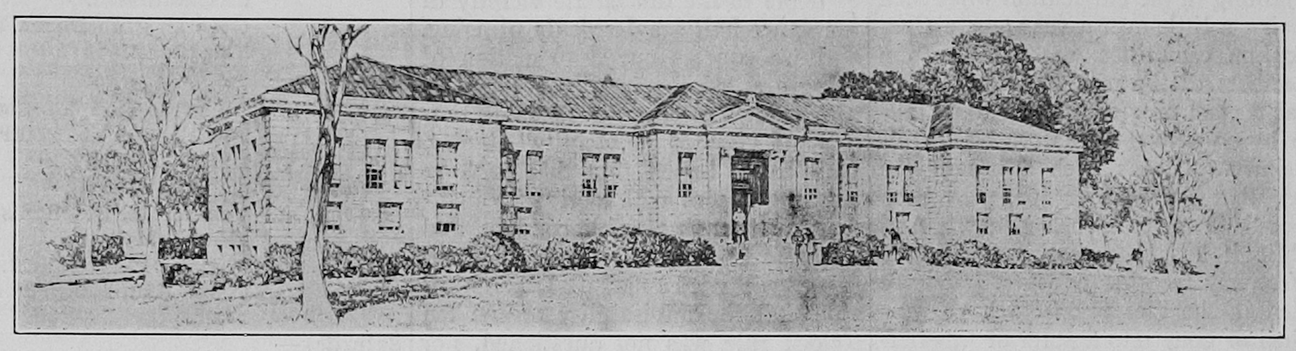
ARTIST'S DRAWING OF NEW LIBRARY



Contract for Building of New Wings Awarded; Completion Expected About February 1, 1928

The contract for the construction of the two new wings to Starr Library has been awarded to the Cummings Construction Co., of Warre, Mass. Preliminary work began this week and completion is expected about February 1, 1928.

According to the specifications each of the new wings will have a frontage of 47 feet and will be 50 feet in depth. This will give the completed building a frontage of 172 feet, or 30 feet more than double the present frontage.

The exterior will be of the same material as the present building which contains six kinds of Vermont marble. The rear of both wings will be in stucco to allow the addition of stack rooms in the future. The decorative and furnishing scheme in the interior will be the same as employed in the present building.

The east wing, which is to be known as the Abernethy wing, will consist of one floor, a basement and probably later a balcony. In the basement there may be a faculty reading room and a seminar room. The main floor of the wing will be employed as a reading room and will contain private alcoves for quiet study. The Abernethy collection will be housed in this wing.

The west wing, to be called the Starr wing, will have reading rooms on both floors. Shelves along the walls will contain books for reference.

The Abernethy collection, which consists of about 5000 volumes will be of special interest to students of American literature. Dr. Abernethy was a professor of literature and author of several volumes on American and English literature. The gathering of his library was the work of a lifetime and contains many valuable first editions of American authors.

The Egbert Starr library, to which the two wings are to be added, was dedicated in 1900. It was erected with funds bequeathed by Egbert Starr and cost $50,000. To this was added $5,000 for interior decoration and $5,000 for the purchase of books.

In 1916 Dr. M. Allen Starr, son of the donor, through whose gift the present proposed additions are made possible, contributed $5,000 for further equipment. The library at present contains about $50,000 volumes.

REVISED STUDENT GOVERNMENT RULES TO BE VOTED UPON

Women In Upper Classes Allowed to Walk in Evening.

Revised Student Government rules and regulations were presented at a meeting of the Association last week, and after being posted for two weeks will be formally voted upon, going into effect probably around the first of June. Among the most interesting revisions is one that allows Senior Junior and Sophomore women to walk with men in the evening within reasonable limits, a privilege heretofore granted to Seniors only. Another revision allows couples to leave the dance floor but not the immediate vicinity of the building when a dance is in progress.

Interest and approval seemed evident in the Women's College when the work of the revisions committee was made known.

Several minor changes in the old rules and regulations were made, but the new rules and the outstanding modifications are stated as follows:

1. Quiet hours shall be chosen by referendum in each house subject to the approval of the executive council.

2. All Freshman and Sophomore girls must have lights out from eleven p. m., until five-thirty a. m.

4. In case of emergency, "After 10 p. m., permission" may be granted by the faculty resident or the president of Student Government in order given. General after-ten permission shall be granted by the Dean of Women.

5. Permission for dormitory girls to stay outside of the dormitories must be granted by the Dean of Women.

6. Boating or canoeing is never permitted except with written permission from the parents. Boating or canoeing is never permitted in the evening.

7. Walking in the evening is not permitted except with at least two girls, except on campus. Walking within reasonable limits is permitted

PENNINGTON WINS IN PARKER CONTEST

Page, Tartaro, and Haskins Obtain Other Awards.

Jefferis M. Pennington won the first award of fifty dollars in the Freshman Parker Prize Speaking Contest held last evening in Mead Memorial Chapel. Winners of the second, third and fourth prizes of thirty-five, twenty-five and twenty dollars, respectively were Maurice J. Page, Dominic Tartaro and Laurence L. Haskins.

In a well prepared speech entitled "Why War?" Mr. Pennington gave a forceful plea for a world of peace. War he declared, was in direct conflict with the kingdom of Christ and a world of intelligence. His speech showed marked individuality and plan.

Mr. Page, winner of second prize, took as his subject, "Men of Middlebury." With excellent delivery he presented sketches of a few of the men who have made the college's name famous in years past. He concluded with a stirring praise of his Alma Mater.

NINE LOSES FOUR GAMES ON SECOND TRIP OF SEASON

Dartmouth, U. of N. H., and Rhode Island Win by Single Point.

The Middlebury college baseball nine in their second trip, which came to a close Friday with the Springfield college team, were defeated by their four opponents, with one exception by a one point score. On Tuesday, in the first game of the trip, Middlebury met a defeat at Hanover, N. H., by the strong Dartmouth team by the score of 2 to 1. On the next day the University of New Hampshire team defeated Middlebury 1 to 0. Journeying down to Kingston, R. I., the Middlebury nine was again beaten by a lone run when the Rhode Island State College team took the game 3 to 2. On the next day, due to the accident at Sommers, Conn., the weakened Middlebury team was beaten by Springfield college 13 to 0.

The game at Dartmouth was a gruelling pitchers' battle between Whittemore of Middlebury and the Dartmouth pitcher, Liberty, who finally weakened in the ninth and was supplanted by Van Riper so that Middlebury could not tie the score in the ninth.

The score follows:

Dartmouth 2; Middlebury 1.

CREATIVE WRITING PROGRAM AT BREAD LOAF ANNOUNCED

John Farrar, Editor of Bookman, to Head the Staff.

The program of the Bread Loaf Conferences on Creative Writing, conducted under the direction of John Farrar, Editor of The Bookman, as a section of The Bread Loaf School of English has been announced by Dean Wilfred Davison. The session will be held this year August 17 to 31 and features a remarkably interesting staff and list of visiting lecturers.

The staff consists of John Farrar, Hervey Allen, Burges Johnson, Herbert Gorman, and Addison Hibbard, representing a wide range of professional ability. These men will give background lectures on the writing of short stories, novels, articles, and poems, with practical suggestions on developing a prose style and the preparation and placing of manuscripts. Informal discussion on both the artistic and practical problems of creative writing, and group and individual conferences on manuscripts brought by the students, will furnish opportunity for practical criticism that should result in marketable writing. The conferences are so arranged that each student receives counsel on his own problems in writing from an instructor with practical experience in the field of his own particular interest.

Mr. Farrar's practical experience as Editor of the Bookman and Editorial Director of the George H. Doran Company, as well as his experience as critic, poet, and playwright, renders him peculiarly fitted to be of practical assistance to young writers seeking expert guidance in the problems of writing.

Hervey Allen is becoming internationally known by reason of his poems, "Earth Moods," his war book, "Towards The Flame," his highly successful biography, "Israfel: The Life and Times of Edgar Allen Poe," and also as a critic of brilliant and sound judgment.

Burges Johnson has had a rich background of experience as editor, author, and critic. He is remembered in connection with Harper's, Everybody's, and Outing Magazines, and as the Editor-in-chief of Judge, as well as for his books.

Herbert Gorman, author of the well known biography of Longfellow, "A Victorian American," has had a varied range of practical and successful experience in writing. He has been teaching this year in the School of Journalism of New York University.

Addison Hibbard is Acting Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Associate Professor of English at the University of North Carolina. He has a large and enthusiastic Southern following and is now becoming widely known in the North.

During the two weeks of the session students will have the opportunity of hearing informal lectures by six visiting lecturers and of conferring with them on literary problems:

Harry Payne Burton, Editor of McCall's Magazine.

Jean Wick, Author's Agent.

Achmed Abdullah, novelist, short story writer, playwright.

Philip Dunning, playwright, co-author of "Broadway," one of the outstanding successes of the theatrical season.

From the number of early reservations and the many inquiries received it is likely that the writers wishing to attend the Conferences will tax to the limit the accomodations available at

THINK OF IT!

According to the final results of the questionnaire Middlebury College is the most undemocratic, most backward, most conservative, most indiscriminate, most inconsistent, and hypocritical prep-school in New England.

In the minds of those who compiled the statistics, and the editors, a more thorough manifestation of absolute thoughtlessness on the part of students could hardly have been effected. The aim in publishing the questionnaire in the Campus two days before it was circulated, was to promote a bit of previous thought. And if the results in the three last questions are indicative of Middlebury thought, Middlebury has a right to be called prep-schoolish.

It is very evident that an over-large percentage of the attitudes toward and ideas regarding the administration are derived from prejudiced, ungrounded rumor. For instance, a surprisingly large number presented for their suggestion for the improvement of Middlebury that "stool pigeons" be abolished. Stool pigeons, at least in the past four years, are a direct creation of accumulative rumor. In spite of what bull session orators may proclaim, the Campus, backed up by every member of the administration, proclaims to and assures the student body that there are no "stool pigeons" at Middlebury. There may be voluntary confession, and "tattle-taling" from students, but it is entirely unsolicited, and, as a matter of fact, seldom acted upon.

The stool-pigeon suggestion was only typical of fully half of the other suggestions. And going through the list, one can see clearly that almost a majority of the criticism is of the student body itself, rather than of the administration. The student body demands responsibility, but when it offers an array of adverse criticisms of itself, criticisms which no attempt is made to correct, can it be expected of the much-criticized administration that such responsibility will be granted? The administration is willing to give the student body any responsibility it will prove worthy of accepting.

College is supposed to stimulate thinking. If serious thought were exerted on some of the problems relative to Middlebury, such criticism as was given in the questionnaire would not have been made. If Middlebury has prep-school characteristics, no set of people makes it more so than the student body.

Think of it!

CURRICULUM MALADIES.

Everyone cannot be satisfied, anyway. As long as two people have two different characteristics, so long will there be dissatisfaction on the part of both, for no one thing can satisfy both to the same degree. There are countless features which are not satisfactory to either the administration or to the student body, and it is just as much the aim of the former to correct such features as it is the aim of the students to criticize them until they are corrected.

As a means of administration and student body assisting each other in attaining in the curriculum what each desire, a little over a year ago, a Curriculum committee was chosen from members of the men's college. This was a most progressive step to be taken by so-termed "conservative" Middlebury. It was such a progressive step that the pioneer idea has been copied in several institutions. And while it has been working out very effectively in other colleges that have tried it, the idea seems to have vanished or gone into a state of hibernation at Middlebury. Where is the Curriculum Committtee?

Without doubt this is one of the outstanding democratic features of this college, and for it to have become inactive is very disconcerting. It is a committee which has the biggest opportunity possible for the improvement of Middlebury, with good mutual to the faculty and the students.

Perhaps one reason for its disappearance can be traced to the fact that it is partially student-appointed, and not responsible to any faculty member. In as much as it is chiefly President Moody who is responsible to and for the action of the committee, and with whom the committee has most of its dealings, would it not, to insure its permanent life, be a plausible suggestion to give the power of appointment and removal of the members to President Moody?

Again, to insure continuous work of the committee it might be a worthwhile suggestion to have the members incorporated in a Seminar course in Sociology, receiving college credits. The members might be self-governing, or responsible to one faculty member with the choice of inviting other professors to lead discussions.

In some form, Middlebury needs a Curriculum Committee, and when the administration has been liberal enough to create one, for student opinion to allow it to die out is very discrediting.

NOW DON'T CRAB.

Expediency, a satisfactory basis for congenial dormitory life and a sensible attitude towards advisable restrictions on daily conduct, seem to have been the chief considerations of the revisions committee of the Student Government Association. In the new regulations presented last week we find few, if any, radical changes, but instead a set of rules superior to the former arrangements mainly as it can be said to be established, accepted and executed by the students themselves, regulations imposed from the inside and not from any external authority.

These rules should, above anything else, obliterate to an almost complete extent that aggravating habit known as "crabbing." If members of the association still indulge in this habit, they can be silenced by some such statement as this: "You were instrumental in choosing the committee which should revise your rules and regulations and in this way you expressed your confidence in their ability to understand the situations at hand and find rules to meet these situations. These rules will go into effect by a majority vote of the Women's College, not through the acquiescence of the administration. Now, whether you belong to the minority or the majority, you have a set of student rules, and any crabbing on your part is plainly an exhibition of poor sportsmanship."

In considering specific innovations, we find various examples of the business expediency practiced by the committee. For instance, no one questions the desirability of certain quiet hours and when these are determined by each dormitory, rules efficient in the individual as well as the general case will be established and a greater willingness to cooperate secured. Freshmen and Sophomores may not enjoy putting their lights out at eleven p. m., but in this way they will be guarded against the fallacy of sitting up all night to cram for an exam or to write a report due several weeks before.

The rules about walking with men in the evening and being allowed out of doors in the immediate vicinity of the dance hall are decidedly pleasing, and we express our appreciation of being granted the intelligence to discern what the terms "reasonable limits" and "immediate vicinity" signify. It is to be hoped that this faith in our intelligence will receive its justification through sensible conduct, and that efforts to "get away with something" will not be made. It is noticeable that the advisability of the ten o'clock rule was not questioned, nor the rules altered about riding with men, which brings us to the point of conservatism.

The college is conservative, to be sure, but this conservative policy is not confined to the administration by any means. What could be less radical than the new rules and regulations? This serves to illustrate the truth of the statement that no matter how radical current superficial ideas may be, the sentiment of the majority and especially of a responsible, thoughtful group, is sure to be conservative, and for the most part wisely so. A.F.

*DISTRUST?

It was most surprising to learn from the questionnaire that the students think the faculty distrust them and that the students distrust the faculty. Granted that the results are true representations of the actual conditions, which is to be questioned, it becomes too serious to pass by with a smile and too important to ignore.

The faculty are anxious to keep the reputation of the college in scholarship and in deportment up to the record of the past and perhaps in this zeal they may have seemed to have been rather autocratic and paternalistic. It may have been that the faculty have not confided their problems, and possibly they have not shared their problems to a desirable degree with the student body. If this be the case let us seek the real cause and then let us remedy the deficiency.

The questionnaire implies that the students distrust the faculty. It says that there is a mutual distrust. Is there really such a distrust? If there is what is the cause and what is the remedy? The problem is serious enough for us to stop a moment to consider.

In the first place why do the students distrust the Faculty? Is it because the instructors examine the students and seem to be prying into the student's affairs when examinations are given, when records of reading are asked for and when certain deportment is demanded? If the students do not desire diplomas and other certifications of the college, of the faculty and Administration, the problem is far different from what it becomes if the students wish to be certified for in scholarship and in deportment. As soon as credentials are demanded from the administration and the faculty the college officials become responsible for the truthfulness and the worth of such diplomas and certifications. Thus immediately the faculty accepting this responsibility proceed to demand certain standards and objectives. It must do so in order to protect the Middlebury diploma. It is possible that there can be better means of getting this result, but the diploma must be protected as long as it is given. It is possible that the students can better aid in getting these results. Is it not final results that we all desire?

Had not previous faculties guarded the value of the Middlebury diploma what would it be worth now? Simply nothing. Middlebury diplomas have value with standard institutions and with standard employers simply because they represent true value in scholarship and culture. The diploma is not perfect. It does not always represent all that could be wished in knowledge and thinking skill and in culture but what ever value it does have depends upon the care that has been taken for a hundred years to see that what it certifies is true and honest and dependable.

If the students are willing to accept more of the responsibilities of guarding the worth of Middlebury diplomas, can we not solve all our differences? It is true we need both a valuable diploma and we also need to allow one getting that diploma to develop such a personality that will be best for him and for his social environment. We need to work out a combination of mass and individual educational ideals that will be most efficient. No college has yet reached the ideal in this. Cannot we unite in this problem?

Can not the students better deal with the slacker and with such as are a detriment to an efficient institution? Can not the students aid in getting better deportment and co-operation? Can not the students aid in limiting the student body to such as are willing to improve by the opportunities here? If the students can do this they can remove much of what appears paternalistic to them when done by outsiders. The faculty must do what is not otherwise done. If problems are solved by the students then the faculty will become less officious. But someone must solve these fundamental problems.

Do the students wish to abolish the degrees and then run the college upon individual desires? If so the problem would be readily solved. If the student expects no diploma and no certification of morals or scholarship then the faculty should be paternalistic if they became inquisitorial. Even so an artist prefers successful followers to those who do not have interest or talent.

Scholarship and moral standing are not individual concerns for all who teach in Middlebury, for all who have previously graduated in Middlebury, all who are at present students in Middlebury are concerned in the value of the education in Middlebury and of the scholarship of the graduates of Middlebury and of the diplomas of Middlebury. Therefore, we need to be jealous of any possible arrangement that may lessen any of the values of college products.

They tell us that a person who controls himself and who seeks on his own initiative his own best welfare becomes more careful with his own activities than he would be if he were compelled to do the same things he chooses for himself. This we know is true. Then let the students co-operate in all that is possible for the advancement of student and college, and let us who belong to the faculty favor any improvement suggested from the student body that will better conditions. Let us all make this little college worth while.

PROF. J. S. KINGSLEY.

COMMUNICATION

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CAMPUS:

Dear Sir:

For the sake of journalistic accuracy I should like to rectify the misapprehensions that I fear may result from the reading of an article in last week's issue of the CAMPUS, which although it is genuinely amusing and provocative of intense mirth, is highly misleading. I refer to the article headed "Princeton To Admit Co-Eds."

To make a long story short and this particular tale brief. The CAMPUS was made the victim of a hoax as several other news publications were. The truth of the matter is that each spring (May 1 is the day I believe) the editorial staff of The Princetonian racks its brains for the most impossible story it can conjure up to feed its readers and one that will at the same time embody a fair amount of humor. In many ways the idea is the same as that carried out by the CAMPUS in its Rumpus issue.

This year the board decided that it would be rather startling to have the late Hetty Green leave the fabulous sum of $20,000,000 to Princeton in order that it might go to the dogs and then went on and planned for the various buildings where they would house and feed these various excuses for the popularity of sport roadsters. All in all it made a good yarn, even to the point that several New York papers pulled out of the muck of the Snyder trial long enough to see if there was any truth to the story and more than one almost fell for it.

That I think explains the whole article but beware of any story that relates that Hetty Green left anyone $20,000,000. It isn't a story, it's an accident.

Cordially,
LLOYD CHESTER HARRIS,

The following shall not be considered nights out: athletic games if one comes directly home, debates, practices for a play, athletics or debates, choir rehearsals, church, reference work at the library, evening classes, business meetings of college activities, Y. W. C. A. meetings, spending the evening in another dormitory than one's own, and attending dramatic club plays. (Freshman women may have three and Sophomore women four nights out a week.)

The revisions committee which submitted the new rules, as well as the new constitution which has already gone into effect, consisted of Eleanor Manley '27, Miriam Deedman '28, Gertrude Parsons '28, Helen French '28, and Mary Tudhope '29. The advice and assistance of the Advisory Committee was very helpful in the problems confronted in the work of revision.

Kappa Phi Kappa Has Banquet.

The Kappa Phi Kappa fraternity held their first banquet at East Middlebury Community House Wednesday evening. New officers were installed as follows: Calvin D. Sinclair '28, president; Corwin L. Happ '29, vice president; Donald L. Lindsley '28, secretary; Professor Charles A. Adams, treasurer.

"Buck Passing" Declared Worst Feature of Administration --- New Gymnasium Foremost Need of Middlebury---Sport Write-ups of Campus Greatest Fault

There were most curious answers to the first twenty-nine subjects in the questionnaire, but surely none of them could approach the curious suggestions in the final three, reported below. In the question, "What's wrong with the Campus"?, almost every feature of it was suggested, from the sports editor (and there is none at present) to the misconceived notion that the Campus was under faculty padlock.

From "What's the worst feature in the administration of Middlebury?" was gleaned most ungrounded and prejudiced answers. Everything was the worst feature from faculty fogies to student spies.

In the final question, "Your best suggestion for the improvement of Middlebury College", many of the answers relative to administrative ideals and traditions again implied a total misunderstanding on the part of students. Sensible suggestions such as "Build a new gymnasium" were set off by dozens of suggestions such as "Make Professor _____reasonable."

DRAMA REVIEW

"MY LADY DREAMS"
By Eugene Pillot
Cast of Characters

Lady_____Margaret Sedgwick
Marie_____Lucy Gooding
Little Old Lady_____Jacqueline Clark
The Other Woman_____
_____Elizabeth McDermott
The Children_____Margaret Harworth
Frances Foley

Directed by Elizabeth Hack and Margaret Moody.

"My Lady Dreams," a charming sentimental comedy, was presented at the Dramatic Club last Thursday evening under the direction of Elizabeth Hack '27 and Margaret Moody '28. This proved to be very entertaining and was highly enjoyed by the audience. One of the most attractive features of the production was the delightful set, a daintily curtained boudoir with a lovely mirror whose reflections gave unusual stage-effects. The attractiveness of the setting was fortified by the effective lighting, and the two together made a most successful background for the play. Color was used skillfully in the costuming which throughout was as desirable in its appropriateness as in its contribution to the color scheme. Careful attention to such details gave evidence of the complete and careful work of the directors and added a great deal to the artistic effect of the play.

The acting was certainly no less admirable. Miss Sedgwick, whom we regret that we shall not see on the stage here again, gave a pleasing interpretation of the Lady who dreamed. Miss Clark added a fine whimsical touch to her work in the role of the little old lady. Miss Gooding was a satisfying maid; and Miss Harworth and Miss Foley quite carried away the affections of the audience as well as of "My Lady" when they pranced about as adorable youngsters in the Lady's dreams. Miss McDermott's acting, in dramatic values, was most commendable; she was cast in a role which the play itself tinged with melodrama and while her acting was extremely vivid and effective, it had also a wise quantity of restraint. The acting, as well as the directing, of "My Lady Dreams" contributed to its success.

"K. O. FOR JUNIE"
By Ramond Bosworth
Cast of Characters

Kid O'Day_____William Tate '30
Georgie_____Elbert Henry '30
Looie Aaron_____Joseph Yaffee '30
Phil Oman_____Harold Bergman '30
Mrs. Stuyvesant-Porter_____
_____Eloise White '29
Henry, her husband__Ernest Clark '29
Junie_____Mary-Alice Drake '29

Directed by Raymond Bosworth '29 and Helen Walter '29.

"K. O. For Junie," a one-act play by Raymond Bosworth '29 was the second play presented last Thursday evening. One would congratulate Mr. Bosworth first of all on his excellent handling of slang, in the dialogue of this decidedly original and equally amusing comedy. But Mr. Bosworth achieved something more than a vivid use of slang. He presented a study in contrasts of colloquialisms and of character, the effete language of Mrs. Stuyvesant-Porter being as absurd in its way as the slang of Kid O'Day or the jargon of the reporter and the boxing manager. No original play produced this year has surpassed "K. O. For June" in cleverness and originality.

The setting and costuming was effective, but next to the real value of the play itself, the work of the cast did most to put "K. O. For Junie" across. Mr. Tate, as the muscular prize-fighter; Miss Drake, his "steady" and Miss White, the incarnation of high-hatness, were the most outstanding; but Mr. Henry did some amusing side-acting, and Mr. Bergman Mr. Yaffee and Mr. Clark played their respective roles with great success. The audience was as enthusiastic about the play as it was amused by it, and certainly departed from the Playhouse with a kindly feeling towards the Dramatic Club and the Wig and Pen that will surely hold over until one-act productions are resumed next fall.

Looking back on the past year, we realize how much constructive work has been done, what a high quality of acting and production has been maintained, and we are very appreciative of the splendid work which has been accomplished. If, with next year's progress in mind, a little constructive criticism may be given, we should suggest the following: first that all the student members of the Dramatic Club who desire to act be given an opportunity to do so, maintaining the group organization as consistently as possible and avoiding selective casts, however attractive they may seem; and second that the production of original plays be subject to increased selectiveness, only those of special merit being granted the privilege of laboratory experiment in Dramatic Club meetings. Beyond this, we have nothing but unqualified approval and hearty congratulations for the one-act achievements of the past year.

UPSON SPEAKS ON FICTION WRITING

"Author Should Have The Artist's Love of His Work."

William Hazlett Upson, author, whose short stories have appeared in many of the leading magazines of the country, gave a short address before the student body last Wednesday morning on the subject "Fiction Writing as a Career."

Mr. Upson said in part: "Writing is primarily an art and anyone desiring to enter the profession should first of all be sure that he has the artist's love of his work.

"To give you some idea of the proportion of accepted and rejected manuscripts in a large magazine house I obtained the following figures from the Chief Editor of the Saturday Evening Post. Unsolicited manuscripts by unknown writers enter that office at the rate of 200 per day or approximately sixty thousand a year. After a careful reading, about ten thousand of these are annually selected as being works of importance and worthy of consideration. Of the ten thousand not more than one thousand are actually published.

"Although the chances for success appear to be against the unknown writer they are no greater than in any other profession. The number of men aspiring for the position of bank president is hundreds of times as large as those who achieve the goal. This is the golden era for the story writer and if a writer can deliver a well rounded quality of work he stands a good show of becoming a successful author.

"The young writer entering the fiction field should always arrange for some other source of income for his first three or four years. Fiction writing can be easily handled as a supplement to another vocation until the writer has won a reputation and a steady market."

10 YEARS AGO

After making a good showing against some of the best college nines in New England this season, the Middlebury team fell down before U. V. M. last Saturday losing a ragged game 7-0. Palmer's excellent pitching and good work in tight places, though handicapped by a sprained thumb, combined with the heavy hitting of U. V. M. at critical moments, contributed to Middlebury's defeat. Maul played a star game for Middlebury, ably assisted by Courtney and Bartlett.

Y. M. C. A. Votes to Discontinue Present Form of Organization

At a recent meeting of the Y. M. C. A. it was unanimously voted to discontinue regular weekly meetings and previous formal organization, and to continue only as an inactive society, the ruling body of which will be a cabinet of five. Their function will be to meet as occasion demands, to form deputation groups, further religious campaigns in the men's college, and be of such service to the college as any part of the administration suggests.

The reason for the above action was due to the total lack of interest in the organization.

CHAPLAIN TWICHELL SPEAKER AT VESPERS

Voice of Conscience Exalted as Pathway to Eternal Truth.

Chaplain Joseph Twichell of Williams College was the speaker at Vespers, Sunday afternoon. He chose as his text Luke 23:9: "Then Herod questioned with him in many words; but he answered him nothing." Chaplain Twichell said in part:

"To show the influence of a stifled conscience on the crises of a man's life, we may take as an example the life of the crafty and cunning Herod, ruler of the Galileans. His power, at the height of his reign, was suddenly threatened by the preaching of John the Baptist, foretelling the Christ, and Herod was troubled. Feeling the necessity of hushing the voice of John he imprisoned him. During a court festival he recklessly promised to grant any request of the Queen's daughter—the request was the head of John the Baptist. True he was face to face with a great decision. The life of an upright man was in the balance of his distorted view of honor: blinded by immorality, he condemned him to death.

"Soon afterward, he heard of another prophet, a young Nazarene, whom he immediately ordered to leave his kingdom. Later, brought to trial before Pontius Pilate, the Young Jew was sent to the judgment seat of Herod, who was most pleased and flattered to think he could now atone for his error in the execution of John. 'Then Herod questioned him in many words; but he answered him nothing.'

"That is the real tragedy of Life; when a man turns toward Heaven only to hear or see nothing. If he would seek Truth, he must live truthfully and find ability to know and understand God's reality through the guide of his own conscience. And thus to know God's eternal Truth, give honest attention and careful heed to the voice of conscience."

Rural Group Gives Play At Ripton Saturday

The Rural Discussion Group of Y. W. went to Ripton on Saturday to give an entertainment, the proceeds from which will be used for improvement of the Ripton School. Besides Zona Gale's play "Neighbors," presented by the group, several orchestral selections, solos, and readings were given. Mr. William Upson, whose summer home is in Ripton, entertained the audience with several accordian solos. The group was transported to Ripton in cars, and a dinner was served them by the people of the town.

BOWDOIN HAS MOST ELABORATE ATHLETIC PROGRAM PLANNED

One of the most elaborate series of athletic plans ever presented by a college of its size was recently announced by Bowdoin. The landscape architect has submitted plans for a new athletic field which will eventually make sixty acres available for a complete development of the present intramural program under the Bowdoin policy of "athletics for all."

When finished the new field will meet every athletic need. Among the things the plans call for are twenty-one tennis courts, six handball courts, five volley ball courts, four soccer fields, a quarter mile track, four baseball diamonds, four football fields, a lacrosse field, four ice-hockey rinks, a polo field, golf course, and a field house.

ALUMNI NOTES

Professor R. John Gettens '23 who has been teaching at Colby College, Waterville, Me., plans to study at Harvard University next year where he has received an appointment to the Austin scholarship for graduate work in chemistry.

Mrs. Warren E. Buffum (Lulu Helen Abel) '23 is an educational missionary at the Institute Normal Methodista de Senoritas in Puebla, Mexico. Her husband is connected with the W. O. Jenkins Sugar Plantation, Hacienda Atencingo Puebla. Since the sugar season ends in June, they plan to return to the States in July.

From Hopei, Tienstsin we receive interesting news of Thelma Havens Ballou '12 whose husband is a missionary there. She says that this city is the place to which all Americans and people of other nationalities who live in the interior have been summoned for protection and that it is a scene of general confusion. She lives in the Chinese part of the city and says that there is considerable trouble especially because of the changes which are continually taking place in the situation. She adds that the question is such an important one to the Chinese that they are willing to sacrifice everything for it.

TENNIS TEAM WINS THREE AND TIES ONE ON NEW YORK TRIP

Young and Hindes Prove Invincible Doubles Team.

Captain Wolfskehl lead his men through a very successful New York invasion, winning all the matches except one and tieing that one with R. P. I. Hindes, playing the best tennis of the trip, won all his matches both in singles and doubles. Paired up with Young, they proved to be an invincible team, winning every match with a comfortable margin. Captain Wolfskehl and all his men showed good form, and none of the matches were in doubt except the R. P. I. match when the Blue team lead at 3-2, but the first doubles was lost after a bitter struggle.

Middlebury 5, Hamilton 1

In the no. 1 singles, Captain Wolfskehl was victorious. Hindes again repeated his feat of last year, and continued to crash his opponent. Seymour, both in the singles and doubles proved to be an easy winner. In the doubles Hindes and Young, thus far unbeaten, showed their worth by wolloping Wagner and Ballard 6-4 and 6-3. The summary: Wolfskehl (M) defeated Morehouse, 6-2 6-4; Seymour (M) defeated Reed (H), 6-4 6-2; Hindes (M) defeated Warner (H), 6-1 12-10; Warfield (H) defeated Young (M), 6-4 9-7. Doubles; Wolfskehl and Seymour (M) defeated Reed and Morehouse (H), 6-2 6-2; Hindes and Young (M) defeated Warner and Ballard (H), 6-4 6-3.

Middlebury 5, Pratt 1

Captain Wolfskehl, Seymour, and Hindes playing number one, two, and three respectively, were invincible on that day. Captain Wolfskehl took the lead from the start and was never headed although he was hard pressed by his Chinese rival in the second set. Seymour found the opposite corners of the court and pounded on them until he emerged the victor by a large margin. The third single was closer. Hindes dropping the first set to another Chinese rival, settled down to business and swept through the last two sets with little effort. In the doubles the Blue was again undefeated. The summary: Captain Wolfskehl (M) defeated Kwang (P), 6-3 7-5; Seymour (M) defeated Smith (P) 6-1 6-2; Hindes (M) defeated Chen (P), 3-6 6-1 6-1; Peterson (P) defeated Young (M), 6-2, 6-3. Doubles; Wolfskehl and Seymour (M) defeated Kwang and Smith (P), 6-3 6-4; Hindes and Young (M) defeated Chen and Peterson (P), 6-4 6-2.

Middlebury 6, St. Stephens 0

It was evidently a Panther's day when the Blue tennis team met and defeated the St. Stephens team by the score of 6-0. Captain Wolfskehl was as usual invincible, and had little trouble in disposing of the rival captain in two love sets. Seymour showed his fine form in the first and last sets in his match with Miller. After losing the second set, Seymour uncorked a whirlwind attack and completely swept his rival off the court and won the set at love. Young playing no. 4 came to his own and defeated his man in three hard sets. His playing was steady throughout. His main attack was the shoulder-high back-hand, and in that position, he was a sure point winner. The doubles were as usual undefeated. The summary: Wolfskehl (M) defeated Burton (St. S.), 6-0 6-0; Seymour (M) defeated Miller (St. S), 6-3 4-6 60; Hindes (M) defeated Mckean (St. S.), 7-5 6-2; Young (M) defeated Morril (St. S), 8-4 4-6 6-0. Doubles; Wolfskehl and Seymour (M) defeated Miller and Burton (St. S) 6-2 6-2; Hindes and Young defeated McKean and Ferber (St. S), 6-0 7-5.

Middlebury 3, R. P. I. 3

Captain Wolfskehl started with a rush, but eventually weakened and lost the last sets. Seymour did not have to extend himself to defeat his man and neither did Hindes have any worry for his victory. In the doubles Hindes and Young again showed their team-work and cooperation and defeated their opponents easily. After that the Blue was leading with the score of 3-2. Wolfskehl and Seymour won the first set and the second was in their favor by a 4-2 margin, but the Blue defense cracked and they lost the set by the score of 8-6. The third was a spectacular struggle. Each team tried to get each point, but the Blue players seemed to be tired and weary of travelling and lost the set after a bitter struggle. The summary: Bourke (R P I) defeated Wolfskehl (M), 6-3 1-6, 3-6; Seymour (M) defeated Boothe (R P I), 6-1 6-2; Hindes (M) defeated Carson (R P I), 6-2 9-7; Johnson (R P I) defeated Young (M) 3-6 2-6. Doubles; Wolfskehl and Seymour (M) lost to Bourke and Stackhouse (R P I), 6-2 6-8 5-7; Hindes and Young (M) defeated Carson and Boothe (R P I), 6-1 6-1.

For the first time Middlebury was represented at the New England Intercollegiates held at the Longwood Cricket Club in Boston. Wolfskehl and Seymour, first and second men of the Blue were entered and drew byes through the first round. In the second round Seymour beat Landaman of Bates in straight sets and Wolfskehl won from Hartzell of Wesleyan. In the first round before the semi-finals the former lost to Wolf of Williams and the latter lost to Marsh also of Williams, present holder of the title. Paired the doubles the Blue team met their second defeat of the season losing to the second seeded doubles combination of M. I. T. in two close sets.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of The Campus:

I have learned through indirect channels recently that students are no longer required to take composition as part of their freshman English courses. If this be so, it is no doubt safe to assume that English composition is not required at any stage of the four-year college course at Middlebury.

Such a fact would account for the weak grammar and wrong constructions which have crept into the news columns of "The CAMPUS" during the past year. (Not for the first time, it is true.) It is impossible for you to secure reporters who can write acceptably straight English, to say nothing of clear, forceful stories, if the college does not demand that each student take a year or more of composition.

Any difficulty which you may have in securing well written material for your paper, however, is only an indication of the condition of affairs in the college and among its graduates. Presumably, those who attempt to write for publication are those most able to do so. The ability of the other 95 per cent of the students may only be conjectured.

In most cases the height of one's all-around ability, academically, is at graduation from college. After that comes specialization in some one field with a gradual dropping away of knowledge in others. Specifically speaking, if a person doesn't know English when he graduates from college he never will, unless he takes up work demanding extensive writing or speaking. In such a case, every fundamental learned in college will come in handy. But the great majority, every one of them using and needing English in their everyday lives yet not working with the language sufficiently to improve their knowledge, will never know much more about it than they did in college. The fact is evident that a college student should be well-trained in English, if in no other of the general subjects.

Yet its importance will never make composition an alluring subject. Only a few students, including none of those who need it the worst, will take courses in it when they are made optional. Even though it may seem oppressive to the students at the time, the college is fully justified and, in fact, ought to require at least a full year's course in English composition. More would do no harm.

If my information concerning actual requirements or lack of requirements at present is incorrect, what I have said holds no less true concerning the general subject. If a year is required now, indications seem to be that two years would be desirable.

Respectfully yours,
JAMES S. JACKSON, '26.

MIDDLEBURY GIVES $126 TOWARD FUND

Shakespeare Memorial to be Rebuilt at Stratford On Avon.

One hundred and twenty-six dollars have been contributed by the students and faculty of Middlebury during the past week to the American Shakespeare Foundation to help rebuild the burned Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon. Professor Harry H. Clark, assisted by Professor William Northrup Morse, has taken charge of the contributions here at Middlebury.

George Pierce Baker, former head of the famous "47 Workshop" at Harvard, and now chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Shakespeare Foundation, said recently, "Althongh the younger generation has frequently been characterized as spiritually incapable of appreciating Shakespeare, the generous responses of scholastic youth everywhere tend to refute this. Despite the charges that the undergraduate of today is jazz-mad and materialistic, 70 colleges, 100 secondary schools, and the public school children in 18 states are participating in the movement to rebuild the burned Memorial Theatre." With those of other contributors, the name of Middlebury College will be engraved as an Associate Member of the American Shakespeare Foundation on the memorial scrolls to be filed in the Library at Stratford-on-Avon.

The old Shakespeare Memorial Theatre was built at Stratford in 1879. Here, too, were established a school of acting, a picture gallery, a Library, and a museum of Shakespeareana. Stratford grew steadily and soundly in influence and gradually became the center of the Shakespeare world. Annual summer festivals were held; it is possible to see as many as sixteen of the plays in their historical sequence during festival; actors everywhere looked to Stratford for inspiration and guidance. Then on March 6, 1926, fire destroyed the work of nearly half a century. The library and museum were saved, but only the walls of the theatre remained. A few days after the fire the British Committee made an appeal to English-speaking people everywhere to rebuild a new theatre on the ashes of the old; and the American Foundation was formed to cooperate with the British. A program has been drawn up which includes the building of a theatre with 1,000 seats on an enlargement of the old, the endowment of performances and acting companies, and also the extension of the Library.

To carry this program through will require about $2,500,000, of which the British Commonwealth of Nations is to raise $1,500,000, and the United States $1,000,000. America is cooperating well in this attempt to rebuild the theatre and perpetuate the works of the Bard of Avon, leading citizens and schools all over the country are doing their share gladly.

Creative Writing Program At Bread Loaf Announced

Bread Loaf. The interest aroused in the remarkably successful first session of the Conferences last summer has been heightened by the enthusiastic comments on Bread Loaf that have appeared unsolicited in the literary reviews; the most recent of these is an article in the May issue of "Poetry, A Magazine of Verse," written by Harriet Monroe.

A special folder describing the work of the Conferences is being printed and may be secured from Mrs. Pamelia Powell, Secretary of the Summer Session, at the office of President Moody. Any students who are interested in the Conferences should consult Dean Wilfred Davison.

clothes were badly torn. Of the other members of the group, Frederick G. Bossert '29, "Hal" Whittemore, and Manager Whitney received minor injuries.

Sorenson and Marchukaitus were sent back to Middlebury in the evening by train and the other men either came by train or by car. Due to their injuries, Sorenson, Marchukaitus and Saldutti were not able to participate in the Springfield game.

ROSE MARCHIANO CHOSEN DELEGATE

Adelma Hadley Gives Report of Athletic Conference Held at Cornell.

Rose Marchiano '29 was elected delegate to the Hockey Camp at Mount Pocono, Pa., at the meeting of the W. A. A. Council last Wednesday. The conference will be held shortly before the opening of college next fall. Representatives from the larger American colleges and well known professional clubs will be present. Miss Marchiano is well fitted to represent Middlebury, having been on the All-Middlebury hockey team the past two years.

An excellent report of the Athletic Conference of American College Women held at Cornell last month was given by Adelma Hadley '28. She spoke of the attempts to standardize constitutions and point systems throughout the country; and also to bring about mass participation in athletics as contrasted with the old method of emphasizing individual stars. The importance of awards and insignia is decreasing everywhere. Athletics are viewed in the light of useful play and service to those lacking in average vigor and ability.

Middlebury plans to have a play day with U. V. M. early next fall. At this gathering, squads of those interested in different sports will be furnished by each college. Teams including members of both colleges will compete in order that the contest may not become a strict collegiate one, stressing instead the sportsmanship and ability of every individual.

A committee including Gertrude Parsons '28, Rose Marchiano and Sigrid Manty '29 were chosen to revise the point system. The Council wishes that the Association may have a system equal to that operating in the majority of colleges elsewhere.

New Hampshire 1; Middlebury 0.

The New Hampshire game was called in the sixth inning due to rain, leaving the home nine at the top of a 1 to 0 score. Simmons pitched a strong steady game for Middlebury while his opponent Evans struck out 7 men. The lone run was scored in the fourth inning when Hoyt of New Hampshire had stolen second after a hit and scored when a ball thrown by Willis hit Reinhart and bounced out into center field.

Rhode Island 3; Middlebury 2.

In the third game in which Middlebury was beaten by one run Draghetti, the Rhode Island State pitcher proved too much for the visiting nine and until the ninth inning when Collins' double drove in two runs the game was rather one sided. At this point two men were on base in the last of the ninth inning and there were two outs. Collins made a clean hit out into the field and drove in two runs starting a rally that died a short death.

Springfield College 13; Middlebury 0.

The last game of the trip took place on Friday, the 20th, in the afternoon following the smash-up. The team was considerable shaken up both mentally and physically, which fact accounts to a large measure for the 13 to 0 defeat. Sorenson and Marchuakaitis were unable to play as were several other men who were in the car. Hingston was forced out of the box in the third and his place was taken by Simmons who did his best to hold down the score.

Blue Tracksters Place In New England Meet

Gilbert M. Smith '29 won the only points for Middlebury at the New England Intercollegiate Championship Meet at Brunswick, Maine, May 20 and 21, by getting a second in the 220 yard dash finals. Smith, Donald, Arnold and Burrows represented the Blue at the meet. Smith in qualifying for the finals ran against men such as Hussey who competed at the Olympics of 1924, and Mostrom, a New England champion in the dashes. Hussey won the 220, equalling a former record of 22 seconds. The Panther dash man was unable to place in the hundred, with Hussey, B. C., taking first; Morrill, B. U., second, and Mostrom, Bowdoin, third.

Arnold ran a good 880 and a fine mile, but was unable to take points in the events. Burrows and Donald did not place. The three points netted by Smith put the Blue in thirteenth place out of a total of twenty-three schools competing. Maine University won the meet.

"Ideals of America" was the title of Mr. Tartaro's speech. He spoke with feeling of the numberless benefits of America which have made her the land of opportunity that she is today. He compared the status of this country with that of many foreign states.

Mr. Haskins in his speech "Lake Champlain in American History" gave a vivid account of the part played by this famous body of water in the history of the land.

"P. A." letters of recommendation

EXPERIENCED pipe-smokers from Cape Lisburne to Cape Sable (get out your map of North America!) recommend P. A. to you as the finest tobacco that ever lined the bowl of a pipe. You'll check-in with their recommendation.

Why, the instant you swing back the hinged lid on the tidy red tin, your olfactory nerve registers a fragrance like that of a pine-grove on a damp morning. And when you tuck a load of this wonderful tobacco into your pipe — say, Mister!

Cool as Cape Lisburne, mentioned above. Sweet as the plaudits of a first-night audience. Mild as morning in Cape Sable. (That's working-in the old geography!) Mild, yet with a full tobacco body that completely satisfies your smoke-taste. Buy some Prince Albert today and make the test!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

PRINCE ALBERT
—no other tobacco is like it!
